Excerpt: .came to leave the picture gallery, the guardian told them most civilly that there was no hurry--that he could close later, if milord wanted to stay. Lord Favershall s tip must have been a large one, for when they were going out all the people were very civil--servile almost--in their attentions to them. It all pleased Jenny intimately, and she returned to the hotel with him in the highest spirits. Mother was right, she said; he does love me, and it s very nice to be loved by someone of great position. Besides, he s very handsome and distinguished looking. She dressed to come down to dinner for the first time in a week, and she put on dignity with the dress and jewels, as a girl is apt to do; and she swept down the broad stairs for dinner, for one can t...
